Newburgh Engineering

Newburgh is a precision engineering company that makes and supplies components for industries ranging from aerospace to deep-sea oil extraction. In 2004 it invested over £5 million to set up a manufacturing operation at Templeborough, Rotherham that employed more than 40 people. Since then they have continued to grow and have recently expanded on site, now with over 100 staff at their Rotherham base.

"RiDO has been brilliant. Yorkshire Forward and Objective 1 have also been excellent. They are all enthusiastic about manufacturing and engineering.

"We wanted to recruit people who believe in engineering; who live and breathe it. The reason we got as many is because we moved into Rotherham. The fact that there are skilled people in the area is a major reason for coming here."

Vincent Middleton, Joint Managing Director
