When Toyoda Gosei, part of the Toyota group, created its first European base in Rotherham, the result was an initial £32 million investment, planned to create 400 jobs by the end of 2004. A further number of £multi-million expansions have since taken the jobs total to over 700. The plant produces rubber weatherseals for car doors and windows.

"We are deeply beholden to the Government and Rotherham in particular for their tremendous support and unfailing co-operation at every step of the way. We investigated cost of production, workforce, environment, access of shipping and receiving, financial support and other factors. We decided to build in Rotherham because the total evaluation is the best."
