Wren Turbines

The Background

Designers and manufacturers of small gas turbines and turbo shaft engines for use in model aircraft. The company, launched in March 2002, now exports to countries across the globe. Wren, which has developed the smallest production gas turbine in the world, has also won the Gas Turbine Engine Efficiency Award.

The Support

Wren was set up by enthusiasts, who have turned their hobby into a profitable business. The team acknowledges that without the continued support of RiDO they would not have had the business acumen to create a successful company. On-site admin facilities, help with recruitment and marketing and support in finding new premises to allow for future growth are just some of the areas they have received help with.

"There's no doubt that without the guidance and commitment of RiDO, Wren would not be in the positive position that it's in today. We talk to other companies in different parts of the country and they are amazed by the time, investment and general support that Rotherham Council has given us. Our decision to open up here has absolutely paid off and allowed us to turn our dream into a reality".
